p young's analysis of amended MPT POC:

Eva,

I have now had an opportunity to review MPT's claim. I do not find anything objectionable about the claim. In this email, I will address each category of damages and the support for such damages.

- 1) Post-petition rent of $11,757,946.35. This would be MPT's rejection damages. Pursuant to 502(b)(6), a landlord's rejection damages are capped at the greater of (i) 1 year's rent or (ii) 15% of the remaining amount due under the lease, not to exceed 3 years rent. According to MPT's calculations, 1 year of rent would be $4,963,287.76; 3 years of rent would be $15,287,783.55; the entire lease balance would be $78,386,308.99; and 15% of the entire balance would be $11,757,946.35. Therefore, their claim for post-petition rent is properly calculated under 502(b)(6).
- 2) Pre-petition rent of $8,246,543.42. This amount just is what it is, and is not capped by 502(b)(6). This is appropriate.
- 3) Pre-petition penalties of $186,499.94. The lease gives them the right to assess late penalties, so this is appropriate.
- 4) Pre-petition expenses, costs and fees of $94,830.40. The lease gives them the right to recover these costs. While post-petition expenses and costs would not be allowable, pre-petition costs and expenses are appropriate.
- 5) Notes of $770,000.00. There were several promissory notes between MPT and Bucks County. Those are separate from the lease and, therefore, the damages are not capped by 502(b)(6). There appear to be balances remaining, so this seems an appropriate damage.
- 6) Additional development payments of $4,057,883.00. Separate from the lease, there was a funding agreement between the parties. My understanding is that, if Bucks County had been current on its obligations, this would have been amortized. Because they were in default from the beginning, the funding agreement gave them the right to call this immediately due and owing. Therefore, I think this is appropriate.
- 7) Construction period rent balance remaining of $4,878,231.12. This could really be considered additional pre-petition rent. The lease between the parties required Bucks County to pay some reduced rent while the building was being constructed. If there was no default, the construction period rent was also going to be amortized across the life of the lease. However, because a default occurred pre-petition, this amount was declared due and owing. So this, like the pre-petition rent, is part of MPT's damages.

One more issue....I've been told that MPT may have later sold this property. Under Delaware law, I do not think the tenant is entitled to a reduction for the sale of the property....I think the entire claim its still owing, under state law. Case 3:09-bk-03570

08/27/2010	08/27/2010 There remain two unresolved preference actions. We should be setting trial dates at a pretrial conference today. I anticipate that we will need to serve some discovery before proceeding to trial. We have a decent settlement offer from one defendant but the other defendant claims insolvency. We could resolve these prior to trial, but I am preparing to go forward. I suspect the judge will set these for trial late in the year P. Young.
